Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16—President Kennedy has decided on the first revision of his six-month-old Administration.

It is understood that he will not only change the top officials of the Central Intelligence Agency but also decide tomorrow on the future direction of the Department of State.

There is a major conflict of personality and policy developing here between the White House and Under Secretary of State Chester Bowles, former Governor of Connecticut and United States Ambassador to India.

For the last several days, rumors have circulated in the capital about this conflict and it is understood that there was a preliminary discussion on the matter between President Kennedy and Mr. Bowles at the White House last Thursday.
